Don Cossacks Chorus Slated For Second Lyceum Program

Jordan To Speak Here Feb. 7-10

Dr. Clarence Jordan, founder of Koinonia Farm, Americus, Ga., will speak at a series of religious emphasis meetings here February 7-10. A native of Tallapoosa, Ga., and a graduate of the University of Georgia, with a bachelor of science degree, Dr. Jordan is well known among Baptist students. He was at one time state BSU president.

After graduating from the University, Dr. Jordan attended the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. He received his Th.M. in 1936 and his Ph.D. in 1939. He was pastor of rural churches during student days; professor at Simmons university (for Negro preachers), director of Baptist Fellowship Center, Louisville, Ky., and superintendent of missions, Long Run Association of Baptist.

Dr. Jordan will speak at 11:30 Sunday morning and 7:30 Sunday night at the First Baptist church. Schedule for the rest of the week is as follows:

10-10:30, Tuesday and Wednesday morning in Beeson Rec hall; 1:05-1:20, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Noonday Retreat, Methodist church; 6:15-7:30, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night in the Baptist Men's Bible Class room.

The company of Original Don Cossack Choristers, under the command of Serge Jaroff, will present a concert in Russell Auditorium next Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock.

The group has traveled over the globe for twenty years. The giant singers meet in solemn conclave to elect their governing committee of 15, a general administrator, and a staff of lieutenants who must execute to the last detail the complicated routine of this body.

The chorus is divided into eight squads of four. Director Serge Jaroff and a business manager are exempted. The adjutant in charge of hotels and luggage keeps each squad within its quota of five medium-sized suitcases. The Cossack singers are addicted to their native recipes, and so the adjutant in charge of hotels, when reserving 24 rooms on one floor must secure cooking privileges.

Keeping the company on schedule between concert appearances is an assignment for the adjutant in charge of travel, who awakens each member by knocking on his door at ten minute intervals starting an hour before bus time.

Besides two officers of finance and public relations, there is a lieutenant of internal decorum who checks on attendance at rehearsals and concerts. A strict sliding scale of penalties for infractions is as follows: five dollars for lateness, ten dollars for absence from a rehearsal, and twenty dollars for absence from

Dr. Guy H. Wells announced today that $300 has been collected on the Roosevelt Ball fund.

Tangled Time Toddles Temporarily

If you meet a friend with an envelope in her hand, better not stop her. She may have only a minute in which to get a letter to the post office by six o'clock while en route to the movies for a five o'clock show.

Likewise, don't hinder the progress of any church goers, for unless you're headed there yourself you probably won't know whether they are coming or going. It's just possible they won't either, and church congregations are mentioned merely as an example of general confusion resulting from the recent shift in time. They go now at the time they used to leave, going by the sun; by the clock it's the same hour provided they're on Central War Time. If on Eastern War Time, it runs in reverse. But no matter how hard they, you or I run, we're bound to end—sooner (CWT) or later (EWT) in the middle of a vicious circle.

In an earnest effort to find if there existed any semblance of order beneath general chaos, this

Georgia Colleges Re-Instated By Southern Association

GSCW and the other state-supported schools of higher learning in Georgia, have been voted full reinstatement in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, president G. D. Humphrey of Mississippi State College announced.

Georgia State College for Women and the other state-supported schools of higher learning in Georgia, have been voted full reinstatement in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, president G. D. Humphrey of Mississippi State College has announced.

Dr. Humphrey, president of the Southern Association and chairman of the executive committee, announced the association following a poll of the executive committee.

"Full reinstatement was given the Georgia schools after Georgia had done everything the Southern Association had asked them to do," Dr. Humphrey said. The reinstatement was retroactive effective September 1, 1942.

The suspension took effect September 1, 1942, when the association decided that Governor Eugene Talmadge had interfered politically in operation of the state's university system when he revamped the Board of Regents after preliminary refusal of that body to oust Dean Walter Coking, of the University of Georgia's School of Education.

Dr. Humphrey said that S. V. Sanford, chairman of the University of Georgia System of Higher Education, had been notified of the reinstatement, and added that "we are all happy that the Georgia schools have been restored to the fully accredited list."

Navy Tide Proves Inspiring

Waves Hut-Two-Three-Four Over Short-Cut To Campus Patriotism

And so the WAVES came! There's something about your uniforms and saucy hats and buttons and bags that gives GSCW and Milledgeville quite a nautical air. We're awfully glad you're here. We love to watch you march and drill as you've probably already noticed. And when you're standing at attention while our flag is raised we get that same widely-pounding heart-choked-up-glorious feeling they call "patriotism."

It must be a wonderful feeling to know that you are actually doing something for our United States—and to know that you, as an individual, are rendering a service that is going to bring that state of affairs called peace a week, a month, or maybe a year nearer February, 1943.

You're an inspiration to us, really. Now that we've actually seen you, and you aren't just hear-say any more, we're beginning to realize how much there is to do. Many people have made vague statements how "we must each do our part." But when we can't exactly visualize what our part is, it leaves us at a loss to know what Uncle Sam needs us to do.

You're helping us get a clearer vision. Now we are beginning to understand that being our best every day by day is going to fit us to take hold of something that will help bring victory when we have finished our job here.

County officials are working on Eastern time, while the city officials are at your service on Central time.

The churches have adopted Central War Time and morning services will be held at 11:30 a.m., and evening services at 7:30.

On Central War Time, too, are the banks which open at 9:00 a.m., and close at 1:30 p.m.

The schools are on Central War Time, but have shifted their opening schedule from 9:30 a.m. opening to 8:30 a.m. This also is the plan most business houses are following. In the latter case the general rule is that merchants are opening an hour earlier and closing an hour earlier "by the clock," which is the same time by the sun as formerly.

The two movie theatres in town are on Central time, opening at 2 p.m.

As for public utilities, the local office of the Georgia Power company will open at 9 a.m. and close at 6 p.m., whereas the Georgia National Gas offices, also on Central time, will open at 8:30 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m.

There Is No Longer A Question

Well, our schools are back from perdition. Following action by the legislature, the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools has voted to restore Georgia colleges, ours among them, to full standing in the association. The reinstatement was retro-active, therefore, we can almost forget all the hullabaloo Georgia went through in the interim.

Governor Ellis Arnall, the legislature, students, citizens are to be congratulated for the part they took in working for the redemption of the schools. Every person interested in education of our state may sigh with relief that our schools are now free of political interference.

Make This Election Real

Campus elections are just around the corner. Nominations begin Monday. Many times in the past, elections in part, have amounted to little more than popularity contests or mere formality for those candidates who ran unopposed. Is this the ideal manner in which campus officers should be elected?

The other extremes should also be avoided. No vote should be cast because the candidate isn't well-liked; no nomination should be signed merely to keep another candidate from being elected unopposed. Both should result from serious thought and whole hearted determination. Every student has the privilege of participating in both nominations and elections...this privilege should be exercised, and it should be exercised intelligently.

INSIGNIFICANT THINGS

By HAZEL SMITH

Numbers are things that never get much attention, yet they enter our daily routine and influence our thinking. We now hear—"Hep, two, three, four! To us these numbers sound strange and a little amusing but quite unconsciously we use them every day. We go up steps TWO at a time, we just must have THREE nickels, and we bought FOUR new shades of nail polish!

"On the DOUBLE is another use of numbers which appear to be new; however, we are always asking for a double helping of ice cream! We speak of the TWO HUNDRED additions to our campus as a vast number, yet we spend TWO HUNDRED dollars almost every quarter!

Smiles are something to which most of us attach no particular emphasis. We also have some and use them for our own purposes. But when away from folk you know, smiles mean more. Friends are made by smiles and all concerned feel better and have a "belonging" feeling if smiles come their way.

We wonder if the things we consider insignificant are really such!

WIT'S END

BURN YOUR BRIDGES BEHIND YOU

By JEWELL WILLIE

All of us like to do at least one thing which we can't do. Our favorite is...well, if we must, Bridge. We suppose this passion is a carry over from a childhood longing to be a civil engineer...to construct buildings and all that sort of thing. Anyway, we wanted to be a civil engineer and build bridges. Alas for all young dreams...Now that we are almost in our Alas for all young dreams...Now that we are almost in our semi-detage, we find difficult to be even a civil bridge player. There is never a week-end which passes without old dreams arising to plague us in nightmarish fashion. What to do?

There is but one solution...find three other card-o-maniacs and settle down to a fiendish game. We decide to agree on one point...whether the play goes to the dealer's right or to the dealer's left. It goes to the dealer's right in the first game and to the dealer's left each alternate game thereafter. (Merely a bit of "first hand" information...never kibitz, dibitz, or mobitz after the first hand unless a sure fire cure for frost bite near.)

The game progresses and enthusiasm wanes. We begin to disagree on the relative importance of Culbertson and individuality to the general success of the game. The rubbers stretch on into the night...it's a never ending marvel to us that the government hasn't determined to ration Congress cards. Or would that do any good?

Eye-lids begin to have that emery board sensation. Vision becomes what is known as "ceiling zero." We decide to play one more hand and go to bed...We lose; we decide to play one more hand and so we play one more hand...WE LOSE...and we play one more hand...WE WIN...and so to bed.

Post script....

Just to end on some sort of note.....

Why didn't they play bridge on the ark?

Give up?

'Cause Noah was sitting on the deck.

"Now why waste all your energy getting physically fit? You'll never look like a WAVE anyhow."

THE WORLD THIS WEEK

By KATHERINE DONNAN

Hitler's High Command announced Wednesday that the German Sixth Army "has succumbed." 500,000 Germans were killed, or seized. All German places of amusement were closed for four days in honor of the Sixth Army.

President Roosevelt, back from Casablanca, emphasized the fact that there would be no negotiated peace to stop this war. At the conference, plans for the complete surrender of Germany were agreed upon. The discussion centered upon whether to strike from the Atlantic coast, the Mediterranean, or both. Another matter was the meeting of General Giraud and General DeGaulle, whose disagreement is well known, but here they cooperated in making a plan to liberate France.

The absence of Stalin and Chiang-Kai-Chek received much comment in the U. S. Roosevelt explained this by saying both men were busy and could not leave their countries. They were, however, in close contact with the conference. Another reason for their absence was: Russia is fighting only Germany, and China is fighting only Japan, while the Casablanca conference dealt with Axis surrender.

The interviews with President Esmet Enonu of Turkey, and President Getulio of Brazil by Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt respectively, were important follow-ups of Casablanca. These parleys worked for a closer relationship between these countries and the Allies. Turkish action in making this public, in the face of German troops on all sides, lets the world know she is "betting on the Allies."

A SOLUTION

The small, crystal ball sat on the table for many weeks. The contents were the result of a few "left-over" pennies after tax had been taken out of a larger coin.

"Jessie" entered the door, an exclamation broke forth and, immediately, the bank was turned from side to side, then juggled violently. I sometimes wondered if Mr. Lincoln didn't feel rather queer after going through such a procedure several times a day.

The pennies multiplied until finally only one more could be dropped into the tiny slot. So, with great ceremony and a still greater one after the deed was done, the bank was broken. After the feast one lone quarter remained. "What to do with this? We could not eat anymore." At last our brains began to work. A dime would buy another bank, and the remaining fifteen cents was dropped into the RED CROSS BOX.

Your Country Needs You Or Is There A Place For Everybody

By "BABY BEN"

Oh, Sir, are you the recruiting officer? Please, you must help me—I do want enlist! This is my first year off at school, and you see, I'm awfully quiet.

The girls who live in my room think I'm a dreadful bore 'cause my voice is monotonous and I live from day to day in the same practical way. They say I'm not original!

Their friends don't like me very much—I don't know why! Last Saturday night, one of the girls in the room helped me to hide in Betty's closet. For a long time I stayed as quiet as a senior in chapel, but about three o'clock I screamed out at the top of my voice! Since Betty threw a book at me, I never go there any more.

Officer, my life is so useless. I want to help win this war. Can't they use me in the WAVES? I admire their precision and accuracy. The WAVES are just like me—they're always on time!

I want to be more than an audience for the roommates moron jokes! I want to do a job in my own significant way. The gals in the room say it's essential that I stay in school, but I think they say that because I'm the tooge that wakes 'em up in the morning—I'm the dope that sends 'em to class on time.

Officer, please say they'll take me—say they can use a good little clock instead of a bugle.
